

Recommended Filmmaking Podcasts

There are many free audio and video podcasts available to help the budding filmmaker. These are some of the ones I recommend that expand on the lessons in this course and will keep you inspired and informed:

Double Down Film Show

The Double Down Film Show is an hour long experience of “real talk” about what it takes to get your project from script to screen. Pete Chatmon and Anthony Artis deliver all of the production, technology, business, and motivational support that filmmakers need to achieve their filmmaking dreams.

<http://www.blogtalkradio.com/doubledownfilmshow>

2ReelGuys

Dedicated to the creative process of visual storytelling, 2 Reel Guys shows that telling a good story doesn't require a lot of money, a lot of gear, or a lot of people. Norman Hollyn heads the Editing Track at the University of Southern California (USC) School of Cinematic Arts. Larry Jordan is a world-renowned digital media trainer, lecturer, and Final Cut Studio expert.

<http://blip.tv/2reelguys>

Film Threat Podcast

Conversations about indie film, film festivals, and whatever pops into the heads of Film Threat owner Mark Bell and contributing editor Don Lewis.

<http://www.filmthreat.com/category/podcasts/>

iTunes Meet the Filmmaker

In iTunes Meet the Filmmaker, iTunes and the Apple Store bring you insights from the makers of today's biggest films. Subscribe to the podcast to hear behind-the-scenes stories from onscreen stars as well as filmmaking wisdom from a diverse selection of writers, directors, and producers.

<http://itunes.apple.com/us/podcast/meet-the-filmmaker/id301899522>

Indy Mogul

Indy Mogul is the first network for the YouTube generation! Indy Mogul has DIY filmmaking tips, step-by-step cheap special effects, previews of upcoming flicks, and reviews of the hottest pictures at the megaplex.

<http://www.indymogul.com/>

New Mediocracy

New Mediocracy is an audio podcast about the world of web video and new media featuring industry producers, directors, writers, and other content creators.

<http://newmediocracy.com/>

Film Riot

From Triune Films and writer/director Ryan Connolly comes Film Riot, a hybrid of sketch comedy, tutorial, reality TV, and a whole lot of nonsense, with the ultimate goal of teaching the art of independent filmmaking. Whether it's low-budget effects or how to create a film from writing all the way to editing, no corner of filmmaking is left unexplored.

<http://revision3.com/filmriot>

Film Method

Film Method is the podcast that will take you through the nuts and bolts of independent filmmaking. In a roundtable discussion format we will meet guests from all walks of filmmaker life who share their golden nuggets of wisdom about everything from hiring a producer and finding a composer, to seeking out investors.

<http://film-method.com/>

American Cinematographer

American Cinematographer magazine interviews cinematographers, directors, and other key collaborators involved in creative process of bringing film and television projects to the screen.

http://www.theasc.com/ac\_magazine/podcasts.php